DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

- (e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.
2. Claims 7, 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Daddis et al, US. Pat. No. 6,806,972.
3. Claims 7, 15, Daddis teaches a hardware management apparatus comprising: first storage means [non-volatile memory, col. 4, line 47] for storing first management information [col. 4, lines 47-48] used to manage a state of hardware upon building a system [col. 4, lines 45-47]; second storage means, provided independently from said first storage means, for storing second management information indicating a current state of the hardware [the new configuration has to be stored I a memory independent fro the first memory in order to compare it with the configuration stored in the non-volatile memory, see col. 4, lines 11-17]; management information storage means for, when the state of the hardware is changed after the system was built, storing the second management information indicating the current state of the hardware in said second storage means [col. 4, lines 11-17]; and display means for displaying a changed state of the hardware on the basis of the first management information stored in said first storage means, and the second management information stored in said second storage means [col. 4, lines 17-21].

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 16-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Daddis et al, US. Pat. No. 6,806,972.

6. Claims 16, Daddis fails to teach the first and second memories store management information used to manage a mount state of a plurality of semiconductor components of an integrated circuit.

However, Examiner asserts that these types of limitations are considered field of use, and are not patentably distinct. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the system of Daddis to manage a mount state of a plurality of semiconductor components of an integrated circuit, because it allows the user to easily reconfigure the plurality of semiconductor components [see Daddis, col. 2, lines 24-27].

7. Claims 17, Daddis fails to teach the first and second memories store management information used to manage a mount state integrated circuits components on a circuit board.

However, Examiner asserts that these types of limitations are considered field of use, and are not patentably distinct. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the system of Daddis to manage a mount state of integrated circuit components on a circuit board, because it allows the user to easily reconfigure the integrated circuits [see Daddis, col. 2, lines 24-27].

8. Claims 18, Daddis fails to teach the first and second memories store management information used to manage a mount state of circuit boards.

However, Examiner asserts that these types of limitations are considered field of use, and are not patentably distinct. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the system of Daddis to manage a mount state of circuit boards, because it allows the user to easily reconfigure the circuit boards [see Daddis, col. 2, lines 24-27].

Allowable Subject Matter

9. Claim 8 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

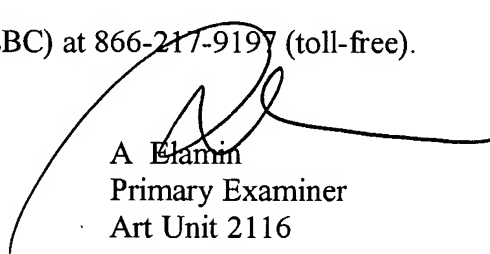

10. Claims 1-6 are allowed.
